Meeting of the President of the General Assembly with NGOs 15 June 2022

How to restore peace on the planet?

Thank you Mr. President.

My association, Ecospirituality Foundation, is activating a project in order to establish a World Ecospirituality Day to be included in the UN world days. In this we are supported by members of the Italian parliament.

We have recently created an event in Rome, at the Campidoglio, with the participation of politicians, scientists, writers, actors, which was the first official step towards this project.

We believe that ecospirituality is a way to create conditions for peace on the planet. Ecospirituality combines several themes: respect for the environment, for animals, spiritual contact with Mother Earth and with Nature.

We believe that it is a revolutionary philosophy and it can represent a solution for this dark period we are experiencing.

Ecospirituality is a philosophy proposed by Giancarlo Barbadoro, together with tribal leaders from all over the planet, to define a concept that comes from the experience of natural peoples, those native peoples who have not been assimilated by the religions and ideologies of majority society. Cultures present on all continents that have maintained contact with Mother Earth, intended as a reference for the spiritual growth of the individual.

Ecospirituality is the philosophy of Nature, an experience of inner harmony that extends to everything around us, respecting the environment and all forms of life. A philosophy that is inspired by Nature in its universal meaning, understood not only in the manifestation of its natural cycles, but also in its mystical meaning, the custodian of a great cosmic mystery.

Ecospirituality leads to reassessment of the relationship of the individual with the environment, where all living creatures, and the planet itself, come to assume a value and dignity equivalent to that of humans.

The individual is therefore not seen as the undisputed ruler of the world they inhabit, but is found to be associated with all the manifestations of life and with the planet itself, in a shared experience that is part of an ecosystem orbiting in space. An opportunity for harmonious integration into the environment, be it understood as a social dimension or as a contact with nature, respecting its harmony.

Ecospiritual philosophy also leads to reassessment of culture and research from a non-anthropocentric perspective and without ideological barriers, in a respectful exchange of all ideas. A culture of new knowledge that combines science and spirituality without favoring certain fields above others.

Thank you.
